Summary: The records of Inter Partes Reviews (IPRs) were reviewed to determine the success rate of these reviews (both in terms of institution and final decisions) for those proceedings in which ALJ Jameson Lee participated in the institution decision and/or the final written decision. This data was further broken down by technology (Tech Center), number of claims, and year. The institution and patentability rates by patent are shown in the chart below. Rates by claim, and other metrics, follow. This report for ALJ Jameson Lee includes 113 IPRs, of which 113 were instituted, and in which 21 final decisions were rendered.

Petition Rates

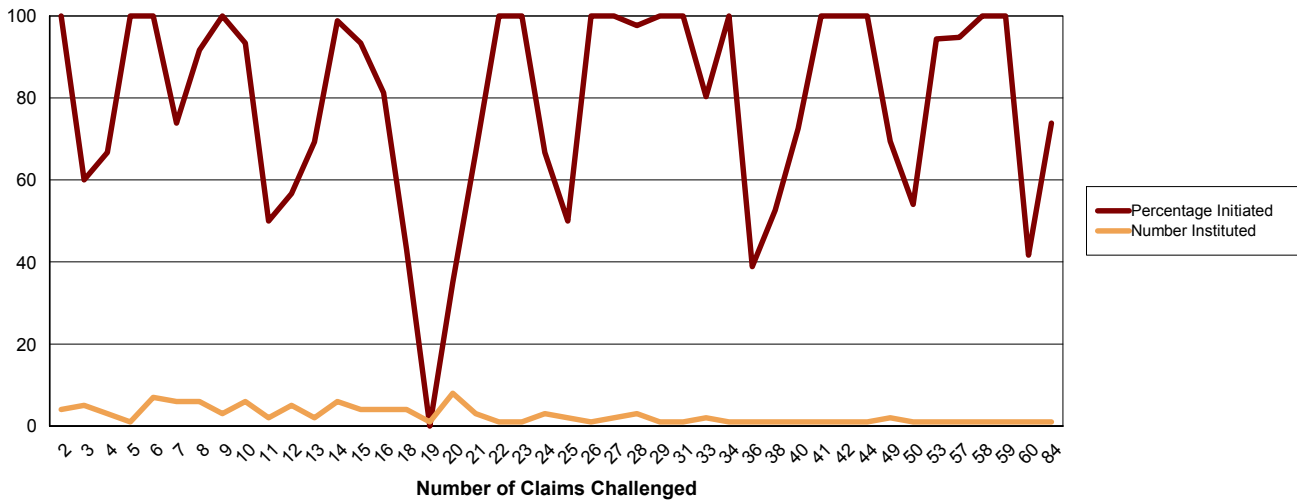

Patentability Rates: The chart above illustrates the probabilities of a patent successfully surviving an Inter Partes Review filing. For all filings (includes filings which did not result in the institution of a review, filings which were settled, and filings which proceeded to a final decision), the patent remained unchanged 51.4% of the time. Note that the institution of a review reduces that figure significantly--to 14.3%. The chart above also shows the rate at which at least some claims survive the filing of an IPR petition. For all filings, the rate at which at least some claims survive is 62.2%. For those cases where the IPR is actually instituted, the "at least some claims survive" rate falls to 30.0%.

Institution Rates by Year and Month of Decision

Institution Rates by Month and Year: Trends in institution rates (percentage of proceedings instituted) can be seen in the chart to the left, where each year has its own line.

Institution Rate, by Number of Claims Challenged

Institution Rate, by Number of Claims Challenged: For those proceedings in which a decision on the institution of the review is issued, the percentage of claims for which the review is initiated varies generally between 60% and 80% of the claims challenged (see chart above and table below). The chart above also shows the number of proceedings for each specific number of claims challenged. Note that for any single ALJ the number of proceedings instituted is quite small for each particular number of claims challenged, which results in a great deal of "jitter" in the corresponding "percentage initiated" line.

All Claims Unpatentable:

The fraction of proceedings where all claims are found unpatentable is shown (by year and month) in the chart to the right. Note that a decision not to institute an IPR is considered to be a patentability holding for this purpose. Note that the percentage of proceedings with a "final written decision" of unpatentability is a different number, which is discussed in a later section.

Proceedings with All Claims Unpatentable

Patentability Rates, by Number of Claims Challenged

Patentability Rates, by Number of Claims Challenged: For those proceedings in which a decision on the institution of the review is issued, the percentage of claims held unpatentable (canceled) is generally around 20% of the claims challenged while the percentage of challenged claims which are not held unpatentable (either original claims or amended) is around 80% (see chart above and table below). The chart above also shows the number of proceedings for each specific number of claims challenged. Note that the number of proceedings with more than 30 claims challenged is quite small, which results in a great deal of "jitter" in the "canceled" and "upheld" lines.

Note that a decision not to institute an IPR is considered to be a patentability holding for this purpose. Note that not all Tech Centers have challenged claims which are canceled.

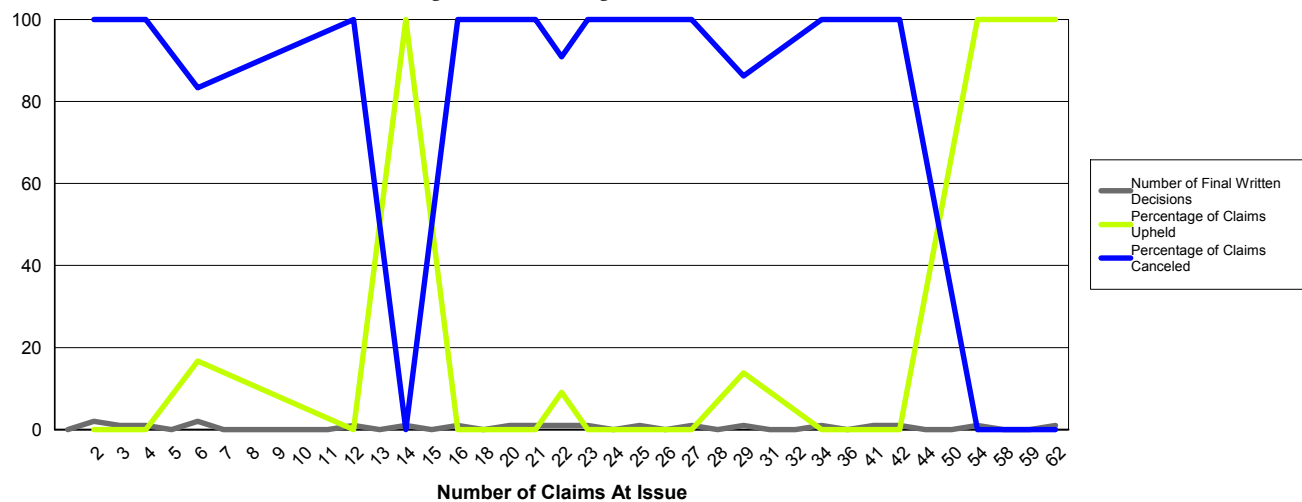

Final Written Decisions with All Claims Unpatentable

All Claims Unpatentable in Final Written Decision: In those cases that proceed to a final written decision, the probability of a finding of unpatentability of all claims is quite high. The variation in this rate is shown in the chart to the left.

Patentability Rates, by Number of Claims at Issue

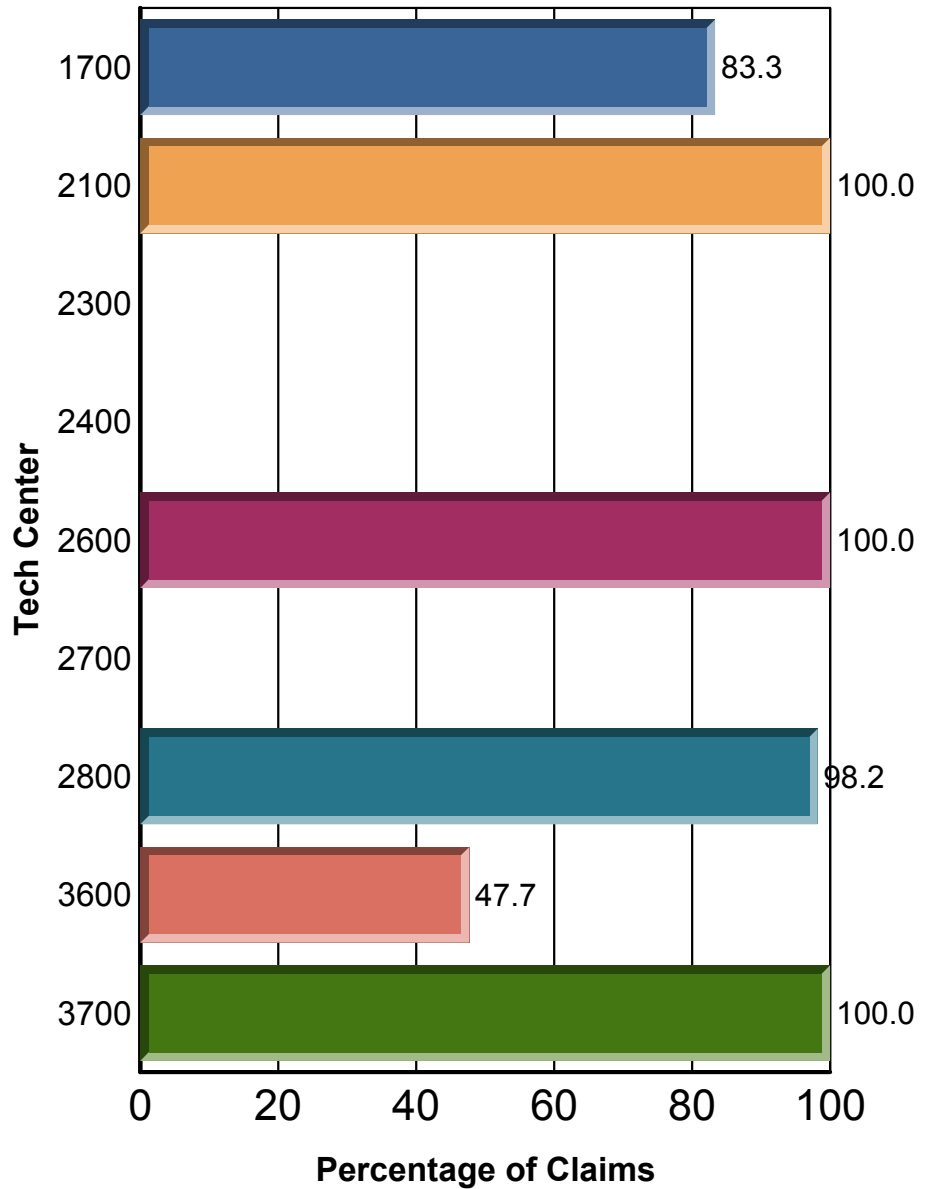

Patentability Rates, by Number of Claims at Issue: For those proceedings in which a final written decision on patentability is issued, the percentage of claims held unpatentable (canceled) is generally around 80% of the claims at issue while the percentage of challenged claims which are not held unpatentable (either original claims or amended) is around 20% (see chart above and table below). Percentage of Claims Which are Canceled in Final Written Decision Claims Canceled in Final Written Decision: The fraction of claims found unpatentable is shown (by Tech Center) in the chart to the right.

Time from Filing to Initiation Decision: The time from petition filing to institution decision (initiation) varies slightly from Tech Center to Tech Center (see second chart below). But whether the petition was granted or denied has little effect on the time to decision (see first chart below). This time has remained fairly stable for at least one year.

by Year and Month

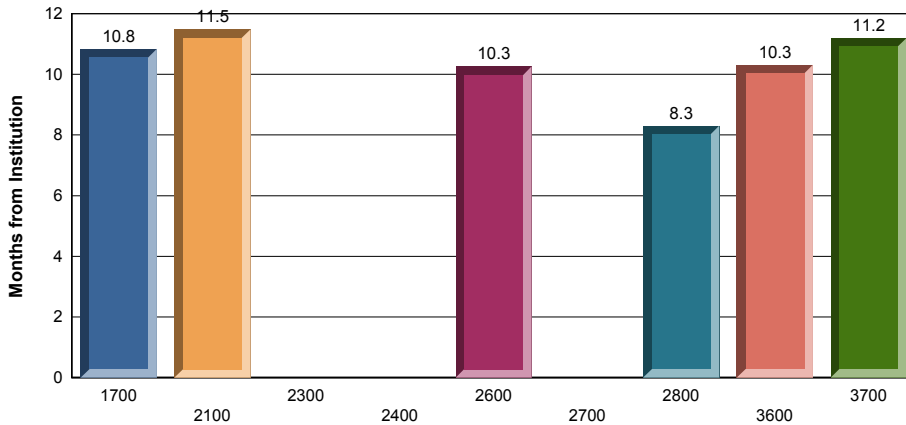

Time from Institution to Final Decision: The time from institution decision to final written decision is around 11 months. Whether the decision is in favor of patentability or not has little effect on the time to final written decision. There is some variation by Tech Center, however (see charts below). Note that not all Tech Centers have final written decisions on at least one proceeding. The variation from month to month is shown in the chart at the bottom of the page.
